TONY THOMAS BIO

For 25 years, Tony Thomas was a prolific producer of comedy programming on television. With partners Paul Junger Witt and Susan Harris, their company is best known for such long-running, popular series as ABC's "Soap" and "Benson," and NBC's "The Golden Girls," "Empty Nest," and "Nurses." Witt and Thomas also produced NBC's "Blossom" and "The John Larroquette Show," Fox's "Herman's Head," and the critically acclaimed CBS drama series, "Beauty and the Beast," which along with "The Golden Girls," "Empty Nest," "Soap," and "Benson," has received numerous Emmy awards and Golden Globes.

Throughout the '80s and '90s Witt-Thomas and Witt-Thomas-Harris combined to form one of the most potent sitcom suppliers in television history. During the early '90's the company had six sitcoms on the airwaves at one time.

Witt and Thomas first teamed together as Producer and Associate Producer, respectively, on the Emmy Award-winning 1971 television movie "Brian's Song." Thomas entered the feature film arena in 1984 as producer of "Firstborn," a Paramount release starring Teri Garr and Peter Weller. Thomas and partner Witt produced "Dead Poets Society," a 1989 Touchstone Pictures release which met with resounding critical success and captured an Oscar for Best Screenplay. Witt-Thomas Films' 1992 release, "Final Analysis," starring Richard Gere, Uma Thurman and Kim Basinger, as well as "Insomnia" in 2002, starring Al Pacino, Robin Williams and Hilary Swank, were critical and commercial successes.

For the past few years, Thomas has devoted himself exclusively to serving on the Board of Directors and raising funds for St. Jude Children's Research Hospital, which his late father, Danny Thomas, founded 40 years ago. St. Jude is internationally recognized as the only bio-medical research center dedicated exclusively to finding cures for catastrophic diseases of childhood including pediatric cancer and sickle cell. Tony and his family are carrying on the tradition of continuing to support the facility. For the past five years, he and his sister Marlo have spearheaded the Thanks and Giving Campaign, which runs from Thanksgiving through December, and raises over $30million for the hospital. Each year Tony has produced national PSA spots and movie trailers for the campaign, featuring celebrities such as Robin Williams, Jennifer Aniston, Morgan Freeman, Ray Romano, Antonio Banderas, Will Smith, Sarah Jessica Parker, Jimmy Smits, and Bernie Mac.

Ground has been broken in Park City for Jupiter Bowl, a 24,000 square foot, upscale family entertainment center that will feature 16 bowling lanes, a children's arcade, billiards tables and a high-end bar and restaurant. It is slated to open in June.

Jupiter Bowl will be located behind the theater complex at the Newpark mixed use development in Park City, serving, along with Best Buy, as a project anchor. Michael Malone, Barry Baker and Tony Thomas are the developers of Jupiter Bowl, which Malone said the partners have been researching and planning for more than three years. It is being patterned after two other popular national upscale bowling concepts, Lucky Strike and AMF300, and will be unlike anything else in the state, he said.

"This has evolved from a nice bowling center into basically a prototype that we think will eventually be rolled out across the country," Malone said. "This will absolutely be the smallest city that this concept is in. But we think that it's going to be embraced by Salt Lake, Heber, Park City. We think that people are going to love it because no one has seen anything like it. Visually, it's amazing on the inside. It's a gorgeous place with great food, and bowling is cool now because it's interactive and you don't have to be good at it."

Of the 16 bowling lanes, Malone said, four will be set aside for private parties and other events and gatherings. The facility's 80-seat restaurant will serve "light, sophisticated" fare, and its presence will allow for liquor to be served throughout the facility.

"Food is a central core to what we do. It's not your father's bowling alley and not your father's food," Malone said. "We're going to have a wood-burning pizza oven and the pizza will off the chart. The food in general will be off the chart. There will be some great salads, a veggie burger, amazing hamburgers like a Kobe beef burger, not just your quarter pounder with cheese. There will be wait service to every area, so if you're at the billiards or the lanes, you will have wait service."

The restaurant menu will appear on LCD screens so that it can easily and quickly be changed. Malone said, the facility's appearance will be noteworthy.

"This is not what I would consider your mountain-style lodge look. It's very, very LA or Vegas club. There's nothing in Utah like it. There are a couple of places in LA and up and down the West Coast and up and down the East Coast and some around the middle of the country, but this has really been playing out in major cities" More than $1 million is being invested in the facility's audio/visual system, which will include a single, seamless wall above 12 of the bowling lanes.

"You can display an entire picture of a wave or you can break it up into pieces and have Monday Night Football on one, a soap on another," Malone said. "So every four lanes is a high-definition picture."

Malone said he expects a third of Jupiter Bowl's business will consist of parties and other celebrations. Discussions are already under way to rent out the entire facility for the 2010 Sundance Film Festival.

Malone, whose background is in technology, said business partners Baker and Thomas both have entertainment backgrounds.

“Barry has been in theater and entertainment his whole life and currently is a managing partner for Boston Ventures,” he said.

Thomas is the son of entertainer Danny Thomas and brother to actress Marlo Thomas, “so he’s been in the entertainment business for 45 years,” Malone said.

The partners are putting up half the project’s cost, while “there are a couple of bankers that are willing to put up the other half,” he said.

Some advertising is planned in Park City this month, to be followed by media in Salt Lake City. Malone said people will be able to book parties at Jupiter Bowl as early as February and that a Web site will be unveiled next month.

JUPITER BOWL ENTERTAINMENT CENTER GETS READY TO OPEN

Written by NewsHound

UTAH - With the new sign going up on the bell tower at Newpark Town Center, the countdown begins for Jupiter Bowl Entertainment Center's official opening in late November 2009.

Newpark Town Center and Redstone Plaza have become the place to go for area residents looking for a variety of dining and entertainment options. With the addition of Jupiter Bowl Entertainment Center, a new dimension has been added to the increasingly popular venues.

"The fact that it's only 20 minutes from Salt Lake City and five minutes from anywhere in Park City is a definite bonus for people looking for something nearby that's out of the ordinary," says Mike Malone, one of three major Jupiter Bowl developers.

After almost four years of planning, the 22,000 square foot, upscale family entertainment center, featuring 16 bowling lanes, 4 private lanes, Wii lounge, an arcade, billiards tables and a high-end bar and restaurant, will soon be a reality for Park City and Salt Lake City residents and visitors looking for a one-stop venue for fun. Barry Baker, also a major developer, said, "Frankly, there is really nothing in Utah to compare it to. Jupiter Bowl is truly unique – it has something for the whole family to enjoy during the day but, it also has the 'cool' factor for nighttime entertainment." Agreed Tony Thomas, another developer, "It's definitely a place to see and be seen."

Jupiter Bowl's experienced management team, led by General Manager Tristan Stone, is putting together all the finishing touches for the official opening. Stone, who has an extensive background in managing entertainment centers in major metropolitan areas, says "The last couple of months have been a 24-7 endeavor of strategizing, organizing, and implementing, not to mention hiring and training staff. Park City has been a change in scenery for me, but definitely not a change of pace. I'm very excited to see everything coming together."

Although the grand opening event is not scheduled until early December, Jupiter Bowl will have its official opening around Thanksgiving. It will open its doors to the general public to experience all the amenities Jupiter Bowl has to offer. Event and party planners are also invited to enjoy the facilities that were especially designed to accommodate groups looking for a memorable venue for their private parties and corporate events.
